

NEWS RELEASE

RELEASE DATE: 22 MAY 2007
RELEASE REF: BAXI 015

BAXI

Picture Caption: left to right Comedian Patrick Kielty, who hosted the awards; Christopher Flaherty, Proprietor of Vietec; David Cook, Sales Director of sponsor Baxi.

Prestigious national award for local heating company

“An inspirational company that had the vision to go the next step.” That was how the judges described Sittingbourne based heating company, Vietec, at the prestigious heating industry H&V Awards 2007, held at the Grosvenor House Hotel in London. Proprietor Christopher Flaherty was presented with the accolade by comedian Patrick Kielty, who hosted the award ceremony, and David Cook, Sales Director of boiler manufacturer Baxi, who sponsored the Domestic Heating Installer of the Year category that Vietec won.

Established in 1996 by Christopher Flaherty, Vietec prides itself on its knowledge of the latest renewable heating technologies, such as solar, and is trained and accredited to carry out solar installations.

Christopher explains: “Renewable energy is very much the future of domestic heating, and I have kept up to date with the latest products, regulations and training in order to work with my customers and advise them of all the alternatives so they can make informed decisions.

“I am proud that my work has been recognised by the industry nationally and held up as an example to other small heating companies.”

For further information on Vietec, please telephone 01795 553606 or visit www.vietec.com

- ends -

For media information please contact:

Jocelynne Rowan, PR Officer, Baxi

T: 01926 478291 M: 07825 602043 F: 01772 646449

E: jocelynne.rowan@baxi.co.uk

NEWS RELEASE

RELEASE DATE: 22 MAY 2007
RELEASE REF: BAXI 015

BAXI

